Author Rights Transference Revista Ingeniería de Construcción

Title of the article: _____

Authors: _____

It is the policy of the Revista Ingeniería de la Construcción (RIC) to safeguard all the authors contributions acquiring the author rights of the articles published in the magazine. In order to do this, RIC has to obtain a written transference of the author rights on the part of the authors who contribute with their articles. This transference of rights will allow RIC to publish and reprint its article as well as to index and/or include it in data bases or other services to which RIC belongs. These workings are essential in the RIC task in spreading the knowledge in the area of the construction engineering , therefore RIC requires the signature of all the authors of the article.

The above identified authors guarantee they are the owners of the work and the respective author rights and they have not previously transferred said rights to another person or institution. The work is an original creation of the authors and it is not copied in any other work, except those parts in which they are properly indicated with reference to the same.

The authors right of the above identified work are transferred to Revista Ingeniería de Construcción del Departamento de Ingeniería y Gestión de la Construcción de la Escuela de Ingeniería de la Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile. This transference becomes effective from the moment of the reception of this form. In addition, the authors assign exclusivity of the article above identified to RIC by a period of 24 months after the reception of this form. The author keeps the ownership right, such as licenses and the total or partial use of the article in works like professorship, revisions and books. If RIC does not publish the work within the 24 months after accepted , these rights are given back to the authors. These transference of author rights must be received by RIC before proceeding with the publication process.
